Informit Humanities & Social Sciences Collection

The Informit Humanities & Social Sciences Collection is Informit’s core academic research collection. This multi-disciplinary collection provides access to fresh perspectives in the arts, communication, education, history, linguistics, politics and more. Dedicated to content from and about Australia, New Zealand, the Pacific and South East Asia, with articles by scholars worldwide, this full text database is an essential resource for students, teachers and researchers seeking comparative regional studies.

Features and Benefits

- Over 150,000 records from more than 770 resources with full text articles dating back to 1964
- New articles added daily
- Content from leading English language research publications with articles written by leading authors in their fields of expertise
- Cross-disciplinary searching covering all branches of knowledge relevant to humanities and social sciences
- Optimal indexing practice to make the most relevant and current content easy to find

Search Platform Features

- Personalised—track content of interest to you with email alerts, RSS and search history tools
- Discoverable—find Informit content fast via global discovery services including Google Scholar, Trove, OCLC WorldCat, Ex Libris Primo, ProQuest Summon Service and EBSCO Discovery Service
- Integrated—link to Informit content from your library catalogue
- Measurable—monitor COUNTER compliant usage statistics using Informit Admin
- Customisable—manage display options, linking preferences and authentication options with Informit Admin

Start searching
https://www.informit.org

Request a quote or free trial
https://www.informit.org/trial-and-quote

Contact Informit
Australia and New Zealand
T +61 3 9925 8210
E support.informit@rmit.edu.au
Informit Humanities & Social Sciences Collection

The Informit Humanities & Social Sciences Collection is a rich source of information for students, teachers and researchers seeking new perspectives and insights into today’s global challenges. The Collection draws together content relevant to the Asia-Pacific region from publishers and authors who are respected internationally.

The Informit Humanities & Social Sciences Collection supports researchers and students as it offers both outcomes and information about a particular model, theory, or methodology used in research projects.

Key subjects

- Arts
- Business
- Education
- History
- Indigenous studies
- Law
- Literature
- Media
- Social sciences

Key titles

- Agora
- Artlink
- Australian Journal of Language and Literacy
- Educational Research Journal
- International Journal of Multiple Research Approaches
- Parity

About Informit

Informit provides access to unique specialist content through its collection of over 100 databases. These cover a wide range of subjects, including health, engineering, business, education, law, humanities and social sciences. Informit’s products—Collections and Media—contain content sourced from publishers, associations and peak professional bodies as well as international authors.

From its head office in Melbourne, Australia, Informit works with library consortia, associations and agents to help users advance their research through access to peer-reviewed and specialist journals, monographs, reports, conference papers and bibliographic indexes, collated with a focus on regional perspectives and otherwise hard-to-find research.

Informit products provide access to authoritative research from Australia, New Zealand, Asia-Pacific and around the world.

Case study

Title: Most Australian voters not influenced by religion
Personal Author: Blackford, Russell
Author Affiliation: Lecturer, School of Humanities and Social Sciences, University of Newcastle
Source: Australian Humanist, The, No. 120, Summer 2016: 15

Abstract: A recent survey conducted on behalf of the Rationalist Association of New South Wales and the Humanist Society of Queensland has found that only 14 per cent of Australians were influenced by their religious beliefs the last time they voted.